ATLANTA, GA.

BATTEDAY EVENING, JULY 18.

GEN. LEEKS RETURN. As we deprecated the advance of Gen. Lau Into the enemy's country at the entert as an unwise and impelific move, we confess we breathe much free and desper new that he and his termy are once mure sais on the South side of the Paternac. It romains yet to be some what man been gained or lest by this expedition. So for as lesses in battle are concerned, we suspect that honors are about easy. The gains on our wide are probably several thousands of cattle. sheep and herics, together with provisions, clathing, medical and other army stares sufficlent to carry Gon. Lan through another fall and winter campaign, but there can be little cloubt as to the fact that he has made it eary for Luxonte to throw into the field against him a fresh army of three hundred thousand men, which we do not believe he could have done had he been left alone in his infamy and shame. But whatever may have been, or may still be, our spinious an this subject, we nevertheless entertain the hope that good and heneficial results may flow from it, and that the invasion was prompted by metives and reasons of which We are processarily ignorant

At the same time, however, we include enother hope that a vigorous offensive defensive will be adopted as our true pelicy in the future. It will be time enough to invade the enemy's territory after he is driven from our own. All that it were probable of even possible for Gen. Lex to have accomplished in Maryland and Cennsylvania could not have compensated for and iers of Vicksburg, Peri Hadson and the larger portion of the State of Mississippi, in eleding its capital, together with all of Middle

Texaceres and its abundant crops. But we kind at difficult to write on this subject without running into a gurrulous and complaining mood, and hence we dismiss it by simply congratulating the country upon Gen. Lun's safe return into Virginia, and by the expremise of the hope that both Rosecuans and GRANT may be very soon met by forces equal to their own and driven from the country they have recently occupied.

SAURION ADARDONED. The telegraph to-day informs us that General James row has succeeded in safely extricating his little army from the tells GRANT, with his mances face, was throwing around him. Yesterday we expressed a derire to hear this news. and to-day we are gratified. The troops are safe, , and ready for other fields; to have remained on the eiler side of Pearl river, would, without sloubt, have resulted in their capture in a very short time.
